

Offering Qualified Faculty Training and Support

"The course audits that Pearson eCollege did for our online courses provided valuable information for the instructors, as well as the administration. The feedback posted in the course audits was very individualized and based on the course (not a generic overview). The feedback was constructive and well thought out. As the Director of Distance Education, I have found the course audits to be a wonderful record of our commitment to online learning."

—Denise Aberle-Cannata,
Director of Distance Education,
Westwood College

Getting an eLearning program off the ground involves more than course management and back-office system integrations. Online learning requires a different pedagogical approach that may be foreign to traditional classroom instructors. An online course must deliver the same learning objectives as its on-campus counterpart using different tools.

To help our Educational Partners transition from on-campus to online instruction (or to help with advancing their online pedagogical knowledge), the Pearson eCollege Academic Services department offers the Instructional Design Consulting team. This in-house team is comprised of instructional design consultants and faculty trainers who provide certified online instruction training and consultation support for the faculty members and trainers of Pearson eCollege's Educational Partners. These instructional professionals collaborate with faculty members and Pearson eCollege's Course Services team to help instructors create the most effective course offerings possible.

Faculty Training

Pearson eCollege Instructional Design Consultants offer faculty training through the Pearson eCollege eTeaching Institute, which is composed of a team of veteran instructional design consultants who teach, train and mentor instructors. All eTeaching Institute instructional design consultants have design and development backgrounds, as well as extensive online and face-to-face teaching experience in higher education, K-12 and corporate learning environments.

The Instructional Design Consulting team offers a variety of training options: face-to-face on an institution's campus, in Denver at Pearson eCollege's headquarters or online through the eTeaching Institute at eteaching.ecollege.com. Pearson eCollege also can develop customized sessions to meet the unique needs of its Educational Partners.

Faculty Support

In addition to offering trainings and workshops, the Pearson eCollege Instructional Design Consulting team also provides ongoing consultation services to mentor and coach instructors on an individual basis. The faculty support is delivered through the following services:

- Seven-day-a-week instructional assistance via phone and e-mail with iSupport service.
- One-on-one, in-house consulting support.
- Course and program review/audit services.
- Automated, self-service course review tools.

For more information about Pearson eCollege, visit www.eCollege.com or call 1.888.376.9496.

eCollege®

A Pearson Company